THE COTTON MARKET

York Stock Ex- Raid in Liverpool Appears to Have Been Engineered From This Side.

> TRADING VERY ACTIVE: PIT ALMOST IN PANIC

That This Body Will Throughout the Week Unusually Heavy Selling, Without Demand, Has Prevailed.

> By Leased Wire to The Tribune. NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—One of the sharpest breaks the colton market has experienced in several weeks occurred today. Liquidation developed suddenly as a result of an expected collapse in the Liverpool market, where a raid, apparcarry engineered from this side, was in progress. It was estimated 125,000 bales were side. Losses here in the active options ranged from 25 to 32 per cent as a result.
> The market had one of the most excited openings of the outpe season.

The market had one of the most excited openings of the entire season. Prices were 10 to 25 points down under active liquidation and aggressive short selling. Frading here was very active. The break into new low ground of the movement uncovered a lot of stopless orders, and was soon in that panicky state where sellers think less of the price at which they are liquidating than of possibilities were they to remain long off the market.

The principal features of the market this week have been the reappearance

The principal features of the market this week have been the reappearance of liquidation, a falling off in the spot demand and speculative buying.

Whatever has been the real cause there has been a noticeable preponderance of liquidation. This has given the market a declining tendency.

The principal buying during the week baseome from scattered purchasers, especially of the scale-down Wall street operator and the trade interests. Spot cotton in the south has declined, chiefly in sympathy, rather than the result of new conditions. At many points the present quotations are nominal from the arbitrary views of the asking prices of holders. As huyers have been unvilling to meet them, business transactions in actual cotton at the principal interior and scalboard spot markets have been smaller this week than for some time. The lates short interest in July and August options in this market pull out chiefly as a hedge against actual cotton, and also against speculative holdings in March and May, and this has heiped to narrow the difference prevailing between those months and the March and May options.

The world's spinners and trade inter-those months and the March and May options.

The world's spinners and trade interests have been adjusted themselves to the shortage of the crop in their consumption and requirements for the balance of the season. Having accumulated large supplies, they have shown no eagerness to buy during the past tendays, notwithstanding the decime. The polley of economizing, which may become general throughout the bountry from the agitation over the high cost of living, may yot be an important factor in off setting the shortage of the crop. Moreover, there is every indication that planters throughout the south are preparing to put in the largest acreage on record this season.
